The ASHM designation is an important stepping stone to the accredited Certified Safety and Health Manager (<https://ihmm.org/cshm/>) (CSHM) certification. Students achieving a degree from an approved ASHM institution only have to demonstrate two years of experience instead of four, to sit for the CSHM exam. In addition to the Board of Certified Safety Professional's Graduate Safety Professional (GSP) designation, students can add the ASHM designation behind their name, signifying to employers their level of preparation for the safety and health profession they are on the path for full certification. Graduates from these programs apply for the ASHM credential upon graduation.
