

International Applicants

Embry-Riddle invites students from around the world to live and learn at our diverse campuses. The admissions office at your chosen campus will be your first point of contact at Embry-Riddle for all your questions and concerns. Our university community creates a welcoming and inclusive atmosphere for international students who are far from home and family. We recognize that international students and scholars contribute unique perspectives from their home cultures and education systems and serve as valuable resources to students interested in learning about the world. We are eager to learn about your cultures here in the United States and Singapore.

Embry-Riddle Daytona Beach, Prescott & Worldwide admissions define an international student as any non-United States citizen intending to study at sites located outside the United States, students who live outside of the United States and are enrolled through Embry-Riddle Worldwide Online, as well as non-residents and non-immigrants planning to study in the United States.

Embry-Riddle Asia Campus defines an international student as any non-Singaporean citizen or permanent resident intending to study in person at the Singapore Campus.

To learn more about enrolling as an international student at one of Embry-Riddle's campuses, refer to the admissions requirements in prior sections of this catalog or contact the respective admissions/international student services office below.
