

Conditional Admission

Applicants who fail to meet full admission criteria may be considered for possible conditional admission on a case-by-case basis. The decision to admit on a conditional basis will be at the discretion of the Director of Admissions, Dean of Enrollment Management, College Faculty and/or Dean, or the Academic Standards and Admissions Committee (ASAC), if applicable.

A written petition for admission, current resume and other supporting documentation may be requested for consideration of admission.

Undergraduate applicants granted standard conditional admission due to academic deficiency should maintain a minimum of a 2.0 CGPA while in this status or risk being placed on warning, put on probation, or suspended, in compliance with university policy.

Undergraduate applicants granted custom conditional admission may have individual terms outlined in their letter of admission. Students will remain on conditional status until they have satisfied the terms of their conditional admission.

Undergraduate students with conditional admission questions should contact their academic advisor.

For Asia Campus applicants, the conditional admissions committee consists of the Associate Vice Chancellor, Academic Officer, and a designated faculty member. The admissions committee will determine if an applicant is eligible to be admitted on a conditional basis.
