A new application is required for students who are no longer considered active. To learn more about returning to Embry-Riddle after an absence, refer to the admissions requirements for your chosen campus.

Daytona Beach & Prescott Campus

An Embry-Riddle student whose attendance at the University is interrupted may be required to apply for readmission. In such cases, a new application for admission must be submitted. For more information, refer to the Continuous Enrollment (<https://catalog.erau.edu/academic-policies-and-procedures/continuous-enrollment/>) section of the catalog.

Worldwide & Asia Campus

A new application will be required for students whose attendance at the University is interrupted for any of the following reasons:

- A student enrolls at another institution without advanced, written approval
- A matriculated student fails to enroll within one year from the ending date of their last course
- A student fails to matriculate within one year of admission
- A student is academically suspended from the University

Prior students with an Embry-Riddle undergraduate cumulative grade point average (CGPA) below a 2.0 may be considered for readmission. Previously suspended students must satisfy the conditions for readmission as indicated in the letter of suspension before being considered for readmission. Files will be reviewed by the Admissions Office and/or Academic Standards and Admissions Committee (ASAC). A written petition for readmission, current resume, application fee, and other supporting documentation, if applicable, must accompany the application for consideration of readmission.
