Continuous Enrollment

Students are considered to be continuously enrolled, regardless of the number of hours for which they register, unless:

1. A student enrolls at another institution without advance written approval.
2. A student fails to enroll in at least one course at Embry-Riddle within a two-year period from the last term of attendance.
3. A student has been suspended or dismissed from the University.
4. A student has completed a bachelor's, master's, or doctoral degree.

A student who falls into one of the exceptions noted above must re-apply to the University under the catalog in effect the semester in which they re-enroll.
