

Undergraduate Research Scholars Program

Embry-Riddle strives to create a culture of knowledge discovery through research and scholarship. Students who aspire to engage in sustained research activities over the course of their undergraduate career are invited to apply for admittance into the Undergraduate Research Scholars Program. Requirements include: two or more terms/semesters of research under the supervision of a mentor; completion of research training; research dissemination; and reflection. Successful completion of the program will result in a Research Scholar notation on the student's official academic transcript.

Students should schedule an appointment with the appropriate undergraduate research office — the Office of Undergraduate Research, Daytona Beach (OUR-DB); the Undergraduate Research Institute, Prescott (URI-PC); or the Research Scholars Program and Pathways to Student Success, Worldwide (RSP-WW and PATHWAYS-WW) — to discuss this opportunity.

Students must submit their application no later than the first day of the term in which they plan to graduate. Applications cannot be accepted after the undergraduate degree has been conferred. See the full requirements and apply for the program (<https://myerau.edu.sharepoint.com/sites/ERAU-Research/SitePages/Undergraduate-Research-Scholars-Program.aspx>).