

Minor in International Relations

Minor courses of study are academic programs designed to satisfy students' personal interest and to meet their professional needs. Students explore, in some depth, the offerings in a field of study.

The Minor in International Relations provides students with an understanding of global dynamics and the skills necessary to navigate the complexities of international affairs. The courses instill a global perspective, allowing students to comprehend geopolitical, economic, and cultural factors shaping international relations. Through critical analysis of international events, understanding of major international institutions, and exploring the intersection of science, technology, and global governance, students gain a comprehensive view of global affairs. Graduates gain skills in effective communication, research, and analytical skills and cultural competency, positioning them for careers in diplomacy, international business, aviation management, STEM fields, and other professions requiring a nuanced understanding of the interconnected global landscape.

A minor course of study provides the student with significant experience in a discipline organized around skills, methodology, and subject matter. To gain the greatest value from their academic experience, students are encouraged to select minors that complement their degree program and/or other minors that they are pursuing.

The student becomes subject to the requirements of the minor as stated in the catalog that are in effect at the time the minor is declared. The department/program chair responsible for a particular minor determines how students fulfill deficits in credits for a minor and certifies that students are qualified to receive the minor.
